

FEB 21 2014

MOLLY C. DWYER, CLERK
U.S. COURT OF APPEALS

NOT FOR PUBLICATION

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS

FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

CHARLOTTE BAXTER, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated,

Plaintiff - Appellant,

v.

RODALE, INC., a Pennsylvania
corporation,

Defendant - Appellee.

No. 12-56925

D.C. No. 2:12-cv-00585-GAF-
AGR

MEMORANDUM*

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Central District of California
Gary A. Feess, District Judge, Presiding

Submitted February 12, 2014**
Pasadena, California

Before: FARRIS, N.R. SMITH, and WATFORD, Circuit Judges.

Charlotte Baxter filed a purported class action against Rodale, Inc. under California's "Shine the Light" (STL) law, Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1798.83-1798.84, and

---

* This disposition is not appropriate for publication and is not precedent except as provided by 9th Cir. R. 36-3.

** The panel unanimously concludes this case is suitable for decision without oral argument. See Fed. R. App. P. 34(a)(2).

Unfair Competition Law (UCL), Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17210. She appeals the district court's dismissal of her complaint for failing to state a claim.

1. Section 1798.83(a) of the STL law requires businesses, which disclose customers' personal information to third parties for direct marketing purposes, to respond to a customer's request to learn the identity of the third parties and the types of personal information revealed to them. Cal. Civ. Code § 1798.83(a). To facilitate these customer requests, a business must adopt at least one of three methods to provide customers with necessary contact information for making requests. See id. § 1798.83(b)(1)(A) (notify customer service employees), (b)(1)(B) (update website), (b)(1)(C) (post physical notices at place of business).

Alternatively, a business is excused from section § 1798.83(a)'s requirement to respond to customer requests, if it adopts a privacy policy which informs customers of their right to prevent disclosure of their personal information and provides a cost-free means to do so or evinces a policy of not disclosing customers' personal information to third parties for direct marketing purposes. Id. § 1798.83(c)(2).

The STL law provides three statutory remedies: (1) "Any customer injured by a violation of [the STL law] may institute a civil action to recover damages," id. § 1798.84(b); (2) "In addition, for a willful, intentional, or reckless violation of Section 1798.83, a customer may recover a civil penalty. . . .,” id. § 1798.84(c); and (3) “Any business that violates, proposes to violate, or has violated this title may be enjoined,” id. § 1798.84(e).

The California Court of Appeal recently interpreted these provisions and concluded that “a plaintiff must have suffered a statutory injury to have standing to pursue a cause of action under the STL, regardless of the remedies he or she seeks.” Boorstein v. CBS Interactive, Inc., 165 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669, 675 (Cal. Ct. App. 2013). To plead a sufficient statutory injury, “a plaintiff must have made, or attempted to make, a disclosure request in order to have standing under the STL.” Id. at 673.

This “court is obligated to follow the decisions of [a] state’s intermediate appellate courts” when “there is no convincing evidence that the state supreme court would decide differently.” Ryman v. Sears, Roebuck and Co., 505 F.3d 993, 995 (9th Cir. 2007) (internal quotation marks omitted). Because Baxter has failed to allege that she submitted a request to Rodale under the STL law, or that she would have, had accurate contact information been provided, the district court erred when it found she had statutory standing.

2. “The UCL provides that to pursue a claim for relief under the statute, an individual must have ‘suffered injury in fact and ha[ve] lost money or property as a result of the unfair competition.” Boorstein, 165 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 681 (quoting Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204). Baxter has failed to allege an injury in fact, because (1) California does not recognize informational injury, id. at 680;<sup>1</sup> and (2) Rodale’s compliance with the STL law was not a “benefit of the bargain” when she subscribed to Runner’s World magazine, Legal Def.Fund v. Mendes, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 553, 560 (Cal. Ct. App. 2008).

The district court’s dismissal of Baxter’s claims is AFFIRMED on the ground that Baxter lacked statutory standing.<sup>2</sup> See Muniz v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 738 F.3d 214, 219 (9th Cir. 2013) (“We may affirm on any basis supported by the record, whether or not relied upon by the district court.”).

---

<sup>1</sup>Even if California did recognize informational injury, Baxter has failed to sufficiently allege an informational injury. Baxter’s mere allegation that Rodale failed to provide contact information does not pertain to the STL’s primary purpose. See Wilderness Soc., Inc. v. Rey, 622 F.3d 1251, 1259-60 (9th Cir. 2010); Boorstein, 165 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 674 (The STL’s purpose is to “provide consumers with information on how their information is being shared by businesses.”).

<sup>2</sup>Baxter’s motion to stay proceedings pending review of Boorstein v. CBS Interactive, 165 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669, by the California Supreme Court is DENIED. Boorstein has only requested review by the California Supreme Court.